LINCOLN

More than ever in these times the nation needs a Lincoln. The slow, steady, wise, patient and understanding man who led the nation through the perils of domestic war would be invaluable now to our own nation and to all the world. And no less useful would he be when the time for reconstruction arrived. He was struck down just when his wise and patient counsel could have been most useful.

Now in the presence of a far greater and more terrible war, bringing unprecedented grief to all the world, it is well to sit for a little while in the shadow of that great man and commune with his spirit. What would he think? What would he say? What would he do. We cannot tell for certain. But surely out of the silence would come reassurance and direction.

In all this talk about what punishment shall be meted out to Hitler, there is a sense of unreality. Many people remember the first part of the recipe for roasting a hare, which is: "First catch your hare."

COMING BACK

Relatives and friends of soldiers in the Fifth Infantry will be delighted to hear that it has been granted top priority in the Third Army for 30-day furloughs in the United States. The Fifth landed in Iceland on September 5, 1941. It was the first American division overseas, and it is, therefore, fitting that it should be the first one to get furloughs at home.

It is too soon for the friends and relatives to begin looking for letters telling of immediate home-coming, or to listen for the telephone or the doorbell indicating arrival of the looked-for soldier. It takes time for the army red tape to unroll itself, and at present every division finds itself pretty well occupied, in one capacity or another, with the big drive for Berlin.

So weeks, or even months, may ensue before the boys actually get to their homes. When they do, the arrangement is for a month's furlough, not permanent discharge. But it's good news anyhow. Every American, whether or not he knows any of the men in question, will rejoice for them and their home folks.

The Russian sweep to Berlin has captured the fortress of Thorm. One more thorn out of the path.

AMATEUR CODES

A soldier in a camp in the States, expecting soon to go across, wrote in a letter to his mother the following paragraph:

"This deal about writing a code word to find out where I am is silly. A lot of those codes are picked up all the time by censors, because if a man is somewhere vital the War Department would rather it wasn't known. If I am somewhere that is all right to tell about I'll write about it. Anyway, no matter where I am, I'll be able to give the approximate location."

The War and Navy Departments have dwelt on this very theme since Pearl Harbor. Here is an indication that their stern warnings have made an impression in the Army. Too many boys are not going to come back because of "code words." Don't risk your boy's life by trying to know too much too soon.

As for appropriate punishment for the Japs and Nazis, we might sentence both of 'em to live with each other.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

A governor who has lately come much into the public eye is Ellis G. Arnall of Georgia. He has just succeeded in getting the legislature to repeal the poll tax, something which they had previously declined to do. Previously he sponsored a constitutional amendment reducing the voting age to 18, making Georgia the first state to take this step. In domestic administration he has been trying to restore the state university to the place which it occupied before the interference of his predecessor, Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

'These Days'

By George E. Sokolsky

FOUR SCORE YEARS AGO

"Four score and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation. . . . It is hard to realize that it is four score and two years since Abraham Lincoln spoke those words. He stands in the middle of our national history. Nearly 80 years preceded his presidency; 80 years have passed since he was our President. His marks the turning point, the center, the changing era of our country."

It is curious how men appear to fit the times. James Buchanan, who preceded Lincoln, was inadequate for the task of holding together a nation that was falling apart; Andrew Jackson, who followed Lincoln, was obviously of sufficient stature for the trials of reconstruction. But Lincoln took us through the war between the states; he left us a nation conceived in liberty; he might have healed our wounds had he been permitted to live for he had malice toward none. He was suited for the hour, he was the expression of a national need.

Since Lincoln, our country has grown from a small nation, torn by strife, to the mightiest power on earth. This was the accomplishment of a free people unhampered by tyrants, by masters, by caste, by governmental domination. Americans understood democracy to mean freedom; they understood a republic to be a system of government mastered by the people themselves. This country forsook all forms of slavery; we rejected the enslavement of individuals to private masters, but even more, we rejected the enslavement of the individual to his government. We knew no rulers. We refused to bow to any living man. We had no royal family, no hereditary place. There was no elite and no common man. There was equality of opportunity for the competent and the thrifty. The young people of this country would do well to study the history of their own people during that long stretch of 80 years. Too many of them have no appreciation, as they have no knowledge, of the desert and plain and forest this wonderful land, free play of individual freedom, which built out of unmeasured anything upon this earth as a fit place for free men to live. They need to know that life did not begin in 1933 nor even when they were born; that they are the possessors of a heritage rich in God-given gifts and that in the personality of Lincoln is the symbol of all of them.

Perhaps the Presidents of the United States since Lincoln have not been at times dramatic, glamorous figures, startling in manner and speech, astonishing to the multitude like a Turn of Mind or even a Frank Sinatra; but the country grew in territory, in population, in wealth, in productivity, in a rising standard of living, in the improvement of the ways of life and the conditions of work. Nowhere else did men make their own securities of life, while enlarging and strengthening their freedoms. And as John Foster Dulles recently said: ". . . Above all, what we did was done by the people themselves. They kept control of their own destinies and enjoyed the unique satisfaction which comes from the sense of creation rather than being the subjects of official regimentation and the objects of public bureaucracy."

This is a country whose history justifiably evokes pride—not only love of country but pride in country. Dulles in the same address said that "for 100 years people elsewhere have fought to get, not to menace, the kind of society we had invented." And that is true, for during the latter part of the 19th century and even up to the 1920's most of the world looked upon the United States as a model for all peoples. But that is not true today. Somewhere the world has turned away from us and our ways. Europe has degenerated into slavery as an accepted way of life. Even in our country, millions of our people live in slavery to the state. The glorious era initiated by Lincoln has apparently reached its terminal and in its place is being restored the brutal cynicism of the divine rights of the state.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

AILMENTS CAUSED BY EMOTIONS

Some years before he died, Osler, our greatest modern physician, stated that he was gradually cutting down the number of drugs he was using and the time might come when he would use only "suggestive" therapeutics, that is, give consideration to the emotions of the individual and so direct these emotions that recovery from various ailments would be accomplished. Where the emotions are the cause of the symptoms, it is called psychosomatic disorder.

That the emotions have been the cause of symptoms in various organs of the body has been known for many years and the reassuring of the patient has been the treatment given by physicians everywhere. However, it is only within the past few years that physicians have grasped the fact that other organs than the stomach, heart, and intestines can be so affected by the emotions that actual symptoms occur and patients become firmly convinced that they have a dangerous disease.

In the Boston Number of the Medical Clinics of North America, Dr. Stanley Cobb, Psychiatrist-in-Chief, Massachusetts General Hospital, states that psychosomatic medicine is the study of the abnormal functions in any system of the body, set going by the stimulation of the emotions and the study of the ailments resulting from these abnormal functions or actions.

Some idea of the scope of psychosomatic medicine, that is, the number of ailments that can be caused in the various organs of the body, can be gained by a study of the following table outlined by Dr. Cobb.

Stomach and Intestine: Vomiting, dyspepsia, gastritis, mucous colitis, ulcer, ulcerative colitis.
Heart and Blood Vessels: High blood pressure, angina pectoris, and general tiredness or fatigue.
Genito-urinary: Bed wetting, difficult menstruation and impotence.
Locomotor: — Walking. Rheumatoid arthritis, tremors, deformities.
Endocrine: — Diabetes. Severe type of goiter and diabetes, excess fat in certain parts of the body.
Skin: Various skin irritations, hives, itching, psoriasis, eczema.
Eyes: Conjunctivitis, inflammation of eyelids, bulging eyeballs (exophthalmos).
Mental: Fear, anxiety, hysteria.

Some Americans seem to dislike MacArthur's manners, but the Japs like him still less.

"On to Berlin" is the cry now. But we've really been onto Berlin for years and years.

Rents Kept Down

Finance Minister J. M. Sinclair of Northern Ireland believes the standard of living in Ulster has risen in comparison with that of England during the war. Wages, he declared in Stranmillis, have risen to match those of England, but rents have remained below England's.

"At Century's Turn"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

In November, 1926, the Rondout National Bank bought of Mrs. Guilford Hasbrouck the three-story brick building at 22-23 East Strand, for the purpose of taking it down to make room for the erection of the present modern banking house.

The Strand building at the time of the sale housed on the first floor the Bank Arcade, Ben Johnston's drug store and the millinery store of Isaac A. Abrahams, with the offices of Dr. A. A. Stern on the second floor, while the third floor of the building was rented for living apartments.

The C.I.C. Class of the Fair Street Reformed Church on December 8, 1926, presented two plays in the lecture room of the church. Both plays were successfully given. The first was a comedy "Tom's Fiancee" and in the cast were Mrs. Frances Wood, Mrs. Lydia Rich, Caroline Van Keuren, Ruth Ritch, Mary Richter.

The second play was a one-act farce "Sardines" and in the cast were Alice McLaughlin, Isabel Swartwout, Isabelle Herdman, Mrs. Greta Budd and Nellie Woolsey.

Dr. William J. O'Leary died in his home on Fair street on November 19, 1926, aged 48 years. He was born in Kingston in January, 1878, and soon became one of the leading physicians and surgeons of the city and was a member of the Benedictine Hospital staff. In 1914 he and his brother, Dr. John G. O'Leary, became associated in the practice of medicine under the firm name of W. J. and J. G. O'Leary.

Another well known man who died on December 13, 1926, was Richard Dave of Lawrence street, at the age of 74 years. For many years he was active in the religious, fraternal and musical life of Kingston.

He was born in England in 1852, and came to Kingston in 1873, where he resided until his death. During the famous Colorado silver rush in the '90's, he and several other Kingston men took part in the rush, but he was forced to return to Kingston in 1877 by the death of his wife.

About 1880 he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, William Williams, and for a number of years they operated one of the quarries of the old Newark Lime and Cement Co. in Poughkeepsie.

Mayor Palmer Canfield in 1911 appointed Mr. Dave to serve as superintendent of the city hall, and he held that post throughout the eight years that Canfield served the city as mayor.

Mr. Dave was a noted baritone soloist and for a number of years he was soloist in the West Street Baptist Church. He also took part in many musical entertainments in the city, and a number of years ago sang one of the leading roles in the opera Mikado when it was presented by local talent.

He was also interested in military affairs and in his younger years served as a member of the Fourteenth Separate Co. of this city.

Formerly he was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Odd Fellows.

SWISS SHORT TON

The cigarette shortage has now hit Switzerland. Several small Swiss cigarette manufacturing companies have suspended operations and others have curtailed their production and have returned their inventories to about half former shipments. The Swiss "tribune" is making strenuous efforts to speed imports through France from Spain and Portugal, but traffic has been slow, evidently because of the destruction of the most interesting political figures to emerge in the month in recent years. 1944, making more that extend well beyond the borders of Georgia.

Today in Washington

Stimson Statement Put in Reverse Publicity Trend on B-24 Results

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 12 — When Secretary Stimson acknowledged publicly the other day that the B-24's had done relatively little damage to Japan and had not fundamentally weakened her production, he was reversing a trend in publicity which has had unfortunate effects.

The power of the airplane as an essential to modern warfare and bravery of our airmen are conceded but the exaggerated claims of what airplane could do to bring Germany to her knees are now being disproved. Even Prime Minister Churchill, who in May, 1943, was telling the world that it was worth while trying to see if airpower alone could defeat Germany played a part in misleading public opinion and depreciating the value of ground troops and field artillery.

Today the American people and the home front generally are being criticized for having let down and the American Congress is even considering an enforced labor statute all because of alleged relaxation or lack of realism in the factories.

But the damage done to morale by the governmental spokesmen themselves and the military men rarely comes to light because a censorship protects the details and a timid Congress is afraid to inquire into mistakes that have been made. But when the war is over the truth about the over-reliance on airpower and the delaying effect it had upon the proper organization of ground forces with sufficient infantry and artillery that might have been in action months sooner on the western front may be revealed.

Along with overemphasis of the "airpower-alone" doctrine went a certain amount of scoffing at the battleship in particular and surface navies in general as obsolete. This too has been disproved. Today seapower which means weapons above and below as well as on the surface has demonstrated that it needs all instruments of combat. America lagged tragically behind in developing the naval aircraft carrier but the Navy men who insisted on strong battleships and plentiful aircraft carriers have been proved right. Without our magnificent seapower to lead the way and protect the landings, General MacArthur would not now be in the Philippines and even Australia would today be in the hands of the Japanese.

The story of how our small, puny aircraft carrier, the USS Yorktown, after the big losses at Pearl Harbor to assure a safe line to Australia and then to get bases from island to island until the hop to the Philippines was possible is the best argument for a large Navy as the first line of defense for the United States years to come.

It would be a mistake, however, to underestimate the future of such strategic air forces as the 20th Bomber Command which is operating under direct orders of the U. S. chiefs of staff and the U. S. Army. Such a force will be a powerful weapon and the day may not be far off when several such strategic air forces scattered all around the world may do more toward assuring peace by the mere presence.

But even when all the resources of strategic air forces are taken into account, the fact remains that the big army of infantry and artillery with tactical airplanes to serve as part of future military calculation on airpower and the delaying effect it had upon the proper organization of ground forces with sufficient infantry and artillery that might have been in action months sooner on the western front may be revealed.

Bill Would Establish New Fare for Subways

New York, Feb. 12 (AP)—A bill scheduled to be introduced in the state legislature today, seeking to establish a fare of no more than 10 cents on New York city subways, will be unpopular by the New York city administration, Mayor F. J. LaGuardia announced.

The nickel fare had previously been a politically invulnerable issue in city elections.

The bill, permissive in nature, provides for a city transit authority and defines its powers, but stipulates that the bill must have approval of the city council and mayor to become operative.

"If it passed," LaGuardia said, "I'll administer it and administer it well. I do think, however, that it is there to be a transit authority, the fare should not be as high as 10 cents."

Dewey Faces Fight To Check Party in Race Bill Reaction

for tomorrow on proposed extension of the Mortgage Moratorium Act.

Delay in filing the Moore commission report on state-municipal fiscal relationships was indicated with the introduction of a bill to extend the due date from February 15 to March 15. The New York Chapter of the National Lawyers' Guild, in a statement, urged greater financial help to cities and said Dewey's fiscal policies toward localities were "very niggardly" compared with those of former governors.

More Harm Foreseen
The State Chamber of Commerce foresaw more harm than good in the Ives-Quinn bill. A letter outlining the chamber's position was sent to legislators over the signature of Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the chamber's committee on public health and welfare.

It declared that "burning resentment, which would result from enforced employment of undesirable persons and from the coercion of one individual to employ another whom for any reason he does not wish to employ, would furnish fuel for intolerance and to eliminate the possibility of race riots, pogroms and the evils associated with the Ku Klux Klan and the Silver Shirt organizations."

Chamber opposition also was based on contentions that such a law would encourage "an undesirable element" from outside the state to come to New York in search of work; tend to drive business from the state and deter outside industries from locating here; open an approach for blackmail by agitators, job hunters and disaffected employees; and "take from the employer his civil right and liberty of choice to enter into proper and necessary contracts for the conduct of his business."

Under the Ives-Quinn measure, a commission would be established with power to investigate discrimination complaints and, failing to adjust them by conciliation, to issue "cease and desist" orders enforceable through the courts.

Bill Gives No Power

Assemblyman Van Duzer asserted that the bill gives courts no discretionary power.

"If the weight of evidence adduced in the quasi-judicial investigation of the employer is conclusive," he said, "the employer is just out of luck. The court, by the explicit language of the bill, is mandated to decide against the employer, and it must put him in jail or fine him, or it may do both."

Another Republican, Senator Frederic H. Bantecor of Poughkeepsie, proposed last week that the whole question of outlawing discrimination in employment be submitted to the electorate next fall.

The Ives-Quinn bill was reported out of the Assembly Ways and Means committee by an 11-3 vote. Dissenters were Republican Assemblymen John S. Thompson of Orleans, Elisha T. Barrett of Suffolk and Benjamin H. Demo of Lewis.

A vote on the bill is expected next week. Irving M. Ives, Assembly majority leader, predicts passage in the face of "serious opposition." So does the measure's co-sponsor, Senate Minority Leader Elmer F. Quinn.

50 Women Join W.A.C. In Roosevelt Company

New York city, Feb. 12 — Fifty women from greater New York were accepted as members of the new Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., W.A.C. company in the first full week of recruiting, Capt. Julia A. Chasins, W.A.C. recruiting officer for the southern New York district, announced yesterday.

The captain said it was expected approximately 350 women from New York city and boroughs and the nine surrounding counties comprising the southern New York district would be secured for the General Roosevelt, W.A.C. unit by the end of February.

Altogether 65 women from this area have joined the W.A.C. from February 1 to noon Saturday, but 15 of them left for basic training immediately and thus could not be included in the company, which is scheduled to leave for training around March 1.

A total of 172 applications for membership in the company were filed in the same period and "several hundred" more were issued, Captain Chasins said. The main recruiting station in Grand Central Palace led others throughout the district in the number of women recruited, the captain added.

Captain Chasins urged women to file applications for membership in the company as soon as possible to assure completion of processing by the time the unit leaves for training at the end of the month.

De Gaulle Parades With General Giraud

Metz, Feb. 12 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle demonstrated complete reconciliation with Gen. Henri Giraud over the week-end by parading side-by-side with his erstwhile political rival in Metz during a two-day trip through reconquered Alsace-Lorraine.

Crowds along de Gaulle's route endured chilling rains to greet with wild ovations the provisional government chief who reiterated France's determination to extend her authority to the west bank of the Rhine.

Giraud, pre-war military governor of Metz, made the trip to that city from his home in Dijon to welcome de Gaulle.

"We will make the Rhine a French stream from one end to the other," de Gaulle told the Metz townspeople, "and this will symbolize the obligation of victory—a durable one this time—and of re-found grandeur."

Apparently alluding to his absence from the "Big Three" conference, de Gaulle said at a reception that it "was a queer peace that is being prepared for us" but that it would be peace—obviously preferable to war.

Connecticut Combats N. Y. Poultry Buyers

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 12 (AP)—Asserting that New York live poultry dealers are threatening the Connecticut poultry by purchasing "a violent" by purchasing birds in excess of state limits, Connecticut wholesalers and retail dealers have declared a two-week cessation of business effective today.

During the period, in which no poultry or poultry products will be bought and sold, the dealers said yesterday at a mass meeting here that they would have more time to organize resistance to what they termed a "black market traffic in live poultry" which they said had reached "threatening dimensions" in this state.

There were indications that the matter would be placed before Governor Baldwin some time during the voluntary business holiday by a committee of representative poultrymen from all over the state.

It was disclosed at yesterday's meeting that protests already have been made to Governor Baldwin by Mayors John S. Monagan of Waterbury and John W. Murphy of New Haven.

British Take Myitson From Japs in Burma

Kandy, Ceylon, Feb. 12 (AP)—British 36th Division troops 95 miles northeast of Mandalay captured the Burmese town of Myitson on the south bank of the Schwelli river and are fighting the Japanese in the surrounding jungle. Allied headquarters announced today.

The communique said that 15th Indian Corps troops made further progress in their drive to stamp out the last enemy resistance on Rumeer Island off Burma, west coast. Final occupation of the island would enable the Allies to launch an attack on mainland supply lines through Taungup feeding Japanese troops fighting in the Arakan district and Irrawaddy valley.

Jr. League Plans Children's Programs

As part of its community project work the Junior League of Kingston is planning a series of radio broadcasts of special interest to children known as "Books Bring Adventure." Thirteen books have been adapted, dramatized and transcribed for this series which bring experiences of other lands and peoples as well as of the United States. Arrangements are now being made with Station WKNY for these programs.

Reports on community projects are being made at the annual February Board meeting of the Association of the Junior Leagues of America, Inc., today in the headquarters at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York city. A total of $455,352 was spent last year on community projects by 157 Junior Leagues in the United States, Canada, Hawaii and Mexico City. All money raised by a League from the community is always spent on that community. To avoid public money-raising events at times when War Bond, Red Cross or war fund demands were urgent, the leagues in some cases voted to use available surplus to meet their community responsibilities. More than 60 leagues are sponsoring local broadcasts of "Books Bring Adventure."

HALVED-VALUE GIFTS AT DOUBLE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Two sisters who have the same wedding anniversary and would like to celebrate by giving a combined party, write me as follows: So many of our friends are the same, we are wondering if, by giving this joint party, all of those who would not know which of us to give their present to, might be placed in the position of feeling it necessary to buy us each a present? We wouldn't want to put them to any such expense.

First of all, the only type of party which obligates every guest to bring a present is a shower. Families and very intimate friends of a bride or bridegroom are expected then to send their presents whether there is any wedding to be invited to or not. But only those who really want to do so, ever take a present to an anniversary party. In your personal situation, you need not worry about the expense because those who would like to give two presents are expected to divide their cost; unless they are easily able, and also want to double it. In other words, it is quite fair to take for granted the difference in the value of what you and your sister each receive may affect you, but should not make any perceptible difference to your guests.

Knit or Not?

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it proper for a woman to keep on with her knitting during a book review?

Answer: Perfectly, especially if she is knitting something inconspicuously small like a sock and if she doesn't too conspicuously count stitches.

When There Is Only One Bridesmaid

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it possible to have just one bridesmaid in addition to the maid of honor? I can't find any mention of this in your book.

Answer: Yes, but in this case the maid of honor and the bridesmaid should be dressed alike and walk together. (The maid of honor directly in front of you, on the right of the bridesmaid.) The way it is recognized that she is the maid of honor is that she holds your bouquet during the ceremony and straightens your train afterwards.

Wedding Formalities

Your wedding can be the "perfect wedding" you've always hoped for if you make thorough, careful plans for it.
